Sketch of St James Church at Warrenton

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.] Warrenton, Va., June 22.—The present St. James Episcopal Church in Warrenton was built in 1864 during the incumbency of Rev. George C. Norton. Prior to that the church stood on the Alexandria Pike, where the First African Baptist Church now stands. In 1875 during the rectoryship of Rev. John S. Lindsay, the church was enlarged and improved. Dr. Lindsay left in 1879, and was succeeded by Rev. George W. Nelson, who was rector for twenty-three years, and who was succeeded by the Rev. William H. Laid. Again during his term of service there was considerable change and improvement made in the church, and the present structure was built on the north of the church, with vestry for the choir.

This structure was destroyed by fire in October of 1910, and the work of rebuilding was begun in the spring of 1911, with the expectation of being finished by Christmas of that year, but owing to delay in material it was not so completed.

The old church was very dear to the people, and contained a number of memorials, many of which were buried in the church. The new church, however, was a new structure, and the old church was a very dear to the people, and contained a number of memorials, many of which were buried in the church.
